YANKEES CAPTURE CHATEAU - THIERRY ACCORDING TO WORD FROM BATTLE FRONT; ONLY 100 MILES FROM GERMANY

Is Point Where American Troops Drove Back Germans In Bloody Battle 26 Years Ago — 1 Yank Column Believed To Have Crossed the Marne.

By Charles A. Smith
(L. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, AEF, Aug. 29 — (INS) — A battle front dispatch today reported American capture of Chateau-Thierry, somber memento of an unforgettable American victory in the last World War.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's morning communiqué placed troops of the U. S. Third Army six miles from the historic Marne River town. But a front-line dispatch said that Chateau-Thierry had been taken, along with Montmirail and Vitry nearby.

Reuters said that Lieut. Gen. Patton's forces now are 100 miles from the German border and only 65 miles west of Belgium's frontier. Chateau-Thierry, where American troops drove back the Germans in a bloody battle 26 years ago, lies 46 miles east northeast of Paris.

A London Times correspondent said that an American column which had pushed several miles beyond Meaux, 28 miles east northeast of Paris, had not yet come in contact with the enemy.

One Yank column was believed to have crossed the Marne, 23 miles due east of Paris, in a 13 mile advance from Meaux, which was captured yesterday.

American forces, according to a headquarters spokesman, are meeting only light and scattered resistance north of the Marne and northeast of Troyes, where they have reached the Aube River.

Northwest of Paris, four Allied bridgeheads across the Seine are being strengthened and deepened to undisclosed depths.

The German garrison at Brest is still holding out against three Allied columns.

In the British sector of the front, remaining remnants of the German 7th Army are being subjected to a savage round the clock aerial attack.

Invite Public To Inspect School Building

An invitation was issued to the public today to visit the Bath street public school building on Thursday evening, from seven until nine o'clock.

The invitation is given by the Bristol School Directors who are eager to show the men, women and children of the community, just what has been accomplished in the way of modernizing an old school building.

Bath street school has been painted inside and outside. Modern lighting and complete re-wiring make a transformation in this building.

New floors will be placed. The painting of the rooms is a special feature. Following the new trend of having various color plans in the separate class-rooms, each room is painted in a different combination of two-tone colors. This is an excellent example of renovation of an old building.

New wardrobes are to be installed later, and toilet rooms renovated.

To buy, to sell, or to exchange—the classified column of the Courier will bring the desired results.

TAXATION AND FINANCE

PART V.:
100,000,000 BONDHOLDERS
(Doylestown Intelligencer, August 29th)

Millions of Americans own War Bonds. To families throughout the nation, these bonds represent both savings and investments; they are the profits of war work, but also they are the means by which homes and farms are to be bought in the future; by which children are to be educated; by which businesses may be started; by which countless American families hope to improve their stations in life.

These bonds are unquestionably the best investment which has been open. Any economic upheaval which would destroy them would first wipe out virtually all other property values. If they are not sound, then neither is money itself nor anything it can buy.

Yet the American people, as sovereigns over their own government, must fully realize both the dangers faced by these investments and the responsibility which the people owe themselves, through their insistence on wise and sound national financial policies, to maintain the value of these bonds.

A philosophy that "we owe the money to ourselves" is not apt to be warmly received by holders of War Bonds who interpret it to mean that we might some day decide to cancel the debt — each citizen just to burn up his War Bonds as a means of balancing the national budget.

It is stupid blindness to pretend that the bonds cannot be in danger; that they run no risk of suspension or repudiation; that it is political and unpatriotic to hint that government policies might lead to inability to repay them.

Such talk may be political, but only in the very best sense of the word; that politics is "the science and art of government." So far as patriotism is concerned those who advocate policies which will insure the repayment in full and on time of the money voluntarily turned over by American citizens to their government can hardly be accused of being unpatriotic.

The first thing to be realized by all Americans who hope some day to get back the face value of their War Bonds is that they are now in business; they are capitalists; more accurately, they are mortgage-holders.

Now, when a business man takes a mortgage on a piece of property, as everyone knows, he makes it his affair to know everything he can about the property, the owner and the earning capacity.

He wants to be sure that the value of the property exceeds the amount of money he is loaning. He makes it his concern to study the earnings and credit of the borrower. He demands that the debtor have reasonable prospect of paying the interest and retiring the principal.

A would-be mortgagor who cannot meet such terms is called a "bad risk," and is refused the loan.

The American people must see to it that Uncle Sam continues to be a "good risk"—that he does not over-

The sale price is not made public. The purchaser is the management of The Monument School, New York state, which group plans to conduct its elementary and high school classes for girls and boys on the large estate.

The Brice estate is located on Hulmeville Road, "Brice House" having 22 large rooms, with attractive sunken gardens and small bathing pool. The woodland, stream and meadows make an attractive setting.

The storage sections of the out-buildings will no doubt be made into class rooms, it is stated, with heat being installed and alterations effected. At the stables it is believed a gymnasium will be arranged.

Mrs. Brice, who has been occupying the apartment at the garage building, plans to take up residence in New York City.

BOCCARDO IS SHOT IN HIS PARACHUTE BY ENEMY GUNNERS

Local Staff Sgt. Killed By Enemy Action In Leap With Crew

KEPT PLANE FLYING

Father of Officer in Crew Informs Parents of Locality

With the sad word to Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Boccardo, 221 Cleveland street, that their son, Staff Sgt. Vincent J. Boccardo, met death in action over Roumania, came information that the young soldier had done excellent work in keeping the plane flying, and no doubt that aided others of the crew to parachute to safety.

Mr. and Mrs. Boccardo received a letter yesterday from Anthony J. Snyder, Detroit, Mich., father of one of the crew members, in which it is stated that the young Bristol man had met death in the service of his country. The Boccardos had at the end of July received information that Sgt. Boccardo was missing over Roumania. He was flight engineer on a B-24 bomber. The flight was believed to have been his first in action.

The letter from Mr. Snyder, father of Lt. Harold J. Snyder, follows:

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 26, 1944.

Dear Mrs. Boccardo: I don't feel like being the first to send you the sad news, and was hoping the War Department would be the first to notify you that your son was killed by enemy fighter planes while parachuting to ground. Eight of the crew were saved, and your son and Ball Gunner Rieten were both killed in their 'chutes. Harold said one engine was shot out and rudder and electric system shot away and your son's good work kept the plane flying, and then they were shot by enemy planes. The gas tanks leaked and set it on fire, and they all bailed out. Your boy and Rieten were buried nicely in caskets with their 'chutes, and lots of flowers. The whole town turned out. If you don't hear from Harold, here is his address.

Sincerely yours,

ANTHONY J. SNYDER.

Sgt. Boccardo, who played out-field for the Voltz-Texaco nine, also had quite a reputation as a bowler in this section. He graduated from Bristol high school in 1941. Boccardo entered the army in March, 1943, training in Florida, Texas, Mississippi and Arizona. He was employed by Wilson Distilling Co. previous to entering the service.

The locality had been missing since July 15th.

In addition to his parents several sisters and brothers survive. Two brothers are in the service, Sgt. Anthony Boccardo, in Italy, and Petty Officer 2/c Albert Boccardo, with the Navy Air Corps in North Africa.

August 25, 1944

Editor Courier:
I have read in The Bristol Courier about the curfew the people of Bristol are discussing. I wish to submit this letter for your consideration.

I think the people of Bristol should consider a few things before they take any action. I think you all should remember that the city of Bristol has hardly any recreation for the teen age boys and girls whatsoever. The younger generation of today wants to go out and enjoy themselves. A

"movie" shouldn't be considered as a well rounded evening for the teen age boys and girls, as you know that we haven't much more than a "movie" in our city. (Why is this?)

As I read in The Courier many times, I have noticed what splendid co-operation the people have taken

in raising funds for worthy activities. I think that since we have such an understanding city, why not raise a sufficient amount of money to build a city recreation center for the teen-age boys and girls? There isn't any reason why our city shouldn't be capable of such a worthy project. I have seen many smaller cities than Bristol that have tried the town recreation center project and they were very successful.

I know for a fact that many children under 16 years of age go miles out of town for such entertainment as roller skating, dancing, parties, etc. There isn't any reason why those things should continue, since the parents of these children are so worried as to their conduct.

I am submitting this letter only

because I was reared in Bristol, and I think that I know the situation of our town.

Thanking you,

goes the tide of
fighting gas!

Now another giant new catalytic cracking plant goes into production . . . climaxing Atlantic's $22,000,000 program of rolling out fighting gas.

This Port Arthur, Texas, unit is a twin of the plant completed by Atlantic at Point Breeze, Philadelphia, just a few weeks ago.

Pouring from the new "cats" day and night, a flood of added war fuel carries Atlantic production to the high-tide in three years of ever-mounting output.

The new upsurge comes as part of the answer to "most urgent" pleas of

U. S. generals at the attack fronts. They have called for shipments of fighting fuel "above and beyond all previous estimates." And they are getting them.

To help keep bomber and fighter planes flying, tanks plunging forward . . . mechanized divisions rolling on . . . is the great objective of Atlantic expenditure today.

It is also an investment in tomorrow . . . when Atlantic will process high-octane motor gasoline . . . bringing you the most economical, most powerful car fuel you have ever known.

GIRL ALL-STARS TO PLAY IN TRENTON TOMORROW NIGHT

Will Oppose the All-Stars of Trenton Playground and Industrial League

THE LINE-UP IS GIVEN

Bristol Girls Present Formidable Lineup of Players

With two victories safely tucked away, the Bristol All-Stars, of the Bristol Girls' Industrial League, will play its third game tomorrow evening on Wetzel Field, Trenton, meeting the All-Stars, of the Trenton Playground and Industrial League. Game will begin at 6.15 o'clock.

The local all-stars have won over the SPARS, of the U. S. Coast Guards, and last week defeated the Women Reserve, U. S. Marines, champions of the Women's All-Service Softball League, of Philadelphia.

Outstanding in the Bristol victories was the pitching of Stella Kleimczak and the fielding and hitting of Theresa Gallagher and Harriet Lodge.

Fans who have seen the local ladies in action have no doubt that Coach Frank Fields has a formidable array of players in Gallagher, Kleimczak, Lodge, Rita McHugh, Laura Baender, Betty Sallustio, Eleanor Hughes, Rose Marrazzo, Betty Linington, Frances Biancino, Viola Vitale, Mildred Ritter, Dorothy Bennett, Edna Dransfield, Ella Mae Picina, Myda Bracey, Irene Van Soest, Pat Walterick, Frances Wright, and G. Lauder.

The games for the All-Stars are being booked by George Moran, president of the Bristol Industrial Girls' Softball Association.

W. B. Nissley, judge of the vegetables, commented on the fine quality of the vegetables exhibited, despite the dry weather, and told about the points to be considered in choosing vegetables for exhibit, which are—uniformity, true to shape, color, size and maturity in growth.

The Home Economics program consisted of two interesting skits; the first put on by the Edgewood and Fallsington Clubs, was a fashion show, in which the 4-H girls exhibited clothing made this year. The first year girls made either a jumper or pinafore; the second, a sports dress of cotton; and the third, a sports dress of rayon. Also, besides these, the first year girls learned to sew on buttons, the second year darning and the third year mending. After the fashion show, ribbons were awarded to the girls by their local leaders: Mrs. Amos Satterthwaite for the Edgewood Club and Mrs. Herbert Dreisbach for the Fallsington Club. The Newtown Club then put on a canning demonstration, showing the correct way to can. Following the demonstration Mrs. Charles D. Lowmes presented the girls with their awards. First awards were received by Betty Lowmes and Betty Myers; second awards by Beasy Esche.

'PRO' FOOTBALL IS MOST COLORFUL, SAYS AN EX-STAR

Bill Osmanski is Serving As Dentist With The Marines

SPIRIT IS MUCH BETTER

Professional Gridders Work Together Better, He Claims

By Charles B. Kopp
Marine Corps Combat Correspondent
(Distributed by I. N. S.)

CAMP LEJEUNE, N. C., Aug. 29.—(INS)—Although he feels most folks won't agree, no less a football celebrity than Bill Osmanski wants to go on record as being of the opinion that professional grid-ders work together better and have more spirit than college players.

Osmanski, now a lieutenant junior grade in the Navy, argued his point today from his dental office here, where he is easier on his Marine patients than he was on opponents of Holy Cross College and the Chicago Bears when he was fullback for those teams.

He recently has undergone Marine training given Navy doctors, dentists, and corpsmen preparatory to duty in the field—and he has his ideas about that, too. "It's tougher than any line I ever hit," he declared.

In support of his stand on pro football, Lieut. Osmanski pointed out that the pros make the game their means of livelihood. "The old salary is at stake," he asserted, "so they gladly put out. Many men who were outshone by team mates in college become great when they play for a living. The competitive spirit is quickened on the outside. The boys are older, more in earnest.

"That's just one man's opinion," he cautioned. "I'm not arguing about the color of professional football as compared with the college sport. Even there, I believe the pro rules make a more colorful contest." Osmanski studied dentistry at Northwestern University during the same five years he was leading the Chicago Bears to unprecedented gridiron heights. He was not alone in his ambition to learn a profession he could use when his playing days were spent. "At one time, we had four doctors, two dentists, and a lawyer on our roster," he said. "The record proves that there was another side to the Bears."

mortgage his resources; that he is sufficiently economical in his national expenditures so that his tax program permits funding the war debt; and that he has a long-term financial program looking to coming out of debt, not getting in deeper.

Repudiation is always a danger, and will be until the War Bonds are repaid. Other nations, in financial straits, have tried it. America has toyed with the idea on various occasions.

The Roosevelt administration does not have a spotless record on the subject of repudiation. When the gold clause was stricken from national securities, a great many Americans deplored the breach of a specific promise. Fewer seemed to understand that the net effect was to pay off these securities on the basis of sixty cents on the dollar. If the New Deal were to repeat this experiment, the effect on holders of War Bonds would be to give them only $15 for $25 War Bonds, $30 for the $50 bonds, and so on.

As already has been shown, inflation could be used to repudiate an even larger fraction of the bonds.

At no time in history has it ever been more to the pocketbook interest of more American citizens to demand a national administration which will stand by its financial guns.

morning communique placed troops of the U. S. Third Army six miles from the historic Marne River town. But a front-line dispatch said that Chateau Thierry had been taken, along with Montmirail and Vitry nearby.

Reuters said that Lieut. Gen.
Patton's forces now are 100 miles from the German border and only 65 miles west of Belgium's frontier.
Chateau-Thierry, where American troops drove back the Germans in a bloody battle 26 years ago, lies 65 miles east northeast of Paris.

A London Times correspondent
said that an American column which had pushed several miles beyond Meaux, 28 miles east northeast of Paris, had not yet come in contact with the enemy.

One Yank column was believed to have crossed the Marne, 33 miles due east of Paris, in a 13 mile advance from Meaux, which was captured yesterday.

American forces, according to a headquarters spokesman, are meeting only light and scattered resistance north of the Marne and north-east of Troyes, where they have reached the Aube River.

Northwest of Paris, four Allied bridgeheads across the Seine are being strengthened and deepened to undisclosed depths.

The German garrison at Brest is still holding out against three Allied columns.

In the British sector of the front,
remnants of the German 7th Army are being subjected to a savage round the clock aerial attack.

Invite Public To Inspect School Building

An invitation was issued to the public today to visit the Bath street
public school building on Thursday evening, from seven until nine o'clock.

The invitation is given by the Bristol School Directors who are eager to show the men, women and children of the community, just what has been accomplished in the way of modernizing an old school building.

Bath street school has been painted inside and outside. Modern lighting and complete re-wiring make a transformation in this building.

New floors will be placed.
The painting of the rooms is a special feature. Following the new trend of having various color plans in the separate class-rooms, each room is painted in a different combination of two-tone colors. This is an excellent example of renovation
of an old building.

New wardrobes are to be installed
later, and toilet rooms renovated.

To buy, to sell, or to exchange —
the classified column of the Courier will bring the desired results.

PART V.

100,000,000 BONDHOLDERS

(Doylestown Intelligencer, August 29th)

Millions of Americans own War Bonds. To families throughout the nation, these bonds represent both savings and investments; they are the profits of war work, but also they are the means by which homes and farms are to be bought in the future; by which children are to be educated; by which businesses may be started; by which countless American families hope to improve their stations in life.

These bonds are unquestionably the best investment which has been open. Any economic upheaval which would destroy them would first wipe out virtually all other property values. If they are not sound, then neither is money itself nor anything it can buy.

Yet the American people, as sovereigns over their own government, must fully realize both the dangers faced by these investments and the responsibility which the people owe themselves, through their insistence on wise and sound national financial policies, to maintain the value of these bonds.

A philosophy that "we owe the money to ourselves"
is not apt to be warmly received by holders of War Bonds who interpret it to mean that we might some day decide to cancel the debt — each citizen just to burn up his War Bonds as a means of balancing the national budget.

It is stupid blindness to pretend that the bonds cannot be in danger; that they run no risk of suspension or repudiation; that it is political and unpatriotic to hint that government policies might lead to inability to repay them.

Such talk may be political, but only in the very best sense of the word; that politics is "the science and art of government." So far as patriotism is concerned those who advocate policies which will insure the repayment in full and on time of the money voluntarily turned over by American citizens to their government can hardly be accused of being unpatriotic.

The first thing to be realized by all Americans who hope some day to get back the face value of their War Bonds is that they are now in business; they are capitalists; more accurately, they are mortgage-holders.

Now, when a business man takes a mortgage on a piece of property, as everyone knows, he makes it his affair to know everything he can about the property, the owner and the earning capacity.

He wants to be sure that the value of the property exceeds the amount of money he is loaning. He makes it his concern to study the earnings and credit of the borrower. He demands that the debtor have reasonable prospect of paying the interest and retiring the principal.

A would-be mortgagor who cannot meet such terms
is called a "bad risk," and is refused the loan.

The American people must see to it that Uncle Sam continues to be a "good risk" — that he does not over-

BOCCARDO IS SHOT IN HIS PARACHUTE BY ENEMY GUNNERS

Local Staff Sgt. Killed By Enemy Action In
Leap With Crew

KEPT PLANE FLYING

Father of Officer in Crew Informs Parents of Localite

With the sad word to Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Boccardo, 221 Cleveland street, that their son, Staff Sgt.
Vincent J. Boccardo, met death in action over Roumania, came information that the young soldier had done excellent work in keeping the plane flying, and no doubt thus aided others of the crew to parachute
to safety.

Mr. and Mrs. Boccardo received a letter yesterday from Anthony J.
Snyder, Detroit, Mich., father of one of the crew members, in which it is stated that the young Bristol
man had met death in the service of his country. The Boccardos had at the end of July received information that Sgt. Boccardo was missing over Roumania. He was flight engineer on a B-24 bomber. The flight was believed to have been his first in action.

The letter from Mr. Snyder, father of Lt. Harold J. Snyder, follows:

Detroit, Mich.,
Aug. 26, 1944.

I don't feel like being the first to send you the sad news, and was hoping the War Department would be the first to notify you that your son was killed by enemy fighter
planes while parachuting to ground.
Eight of the crew were saved, and your son and Ball Gunner Ritten
were both killed in their chutes.
Harold said one engine was shot
out and rudder and electric system
shot away and your son's good work kept the plane flying, and then they were shot by enemy planes. The gas tanks leaked and set it on fire, and they all bailed out. Your boy and Ritten were buried nicely in caskets with their chutes, and lots of flowers. The whole town turned out. If you don't hear from Harold,
here is his address.

Sincerely yours,

ANTHONY J. SNYDER.

Sgt. Boccardo, who played outfield for the Voltz-Texaco nine, also had quite a reputation as a bowler

Bristol high school in 1941. Boccar-

AVIATION'S SCIENTIFIC MARTYRS

One of the tragedies of scientific progress is that often brilliant and brave men must give their lives in the pursuit of fact. Such was the case when Lieut. Col.
Melburn W. Boynton, chief of the medical safety division of the Army's office of flying safety, fell to his death in a high altitude test jump in Ohio.

Colonel Boynton was continuing the experiments of another officer, Lieut. Col. W. Randolph Lovelace. Both men realized that the ever-increasing ceilings of military aircraft required new techniques to insure the safety of crews bailing out at very high altitudes.

Colonel Lovelace made a 40-200-foot jump at Ephrata, Wash.,
and suffered shock and frostbite.
He proved that parachute openings above 30,000 feet are more dangerous than on jumps at lower levels.

Colonel Boynton, who had been an obstetrician before the war, and a medical college professor, was 39. He felt that the cause of safety required his own experimentation. He made leaps into mountainous territory in Montana and into dense woods.
Recently, he had leaped into the sea near Boca Raton, Florida, in a test of water-landing procedure.

He met his death in an attempt at a long, free fall. He jumped from 42,000 feet, planned to delay opening his chute until 5,000 feet above the earth, so that he could test physical reactions on himself. More than 100 Army observers watched the attempt.
But Colonel Boynton's parachute
did not open.

He died as much a hero as any man on a fighting front. May aviation long remember his name as one of its many martyrs in the interest of its progress.

SPREAD OF POLIO

There is no longer any doubt about the epidemic proportions
of infantile paralysis this year.
The National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis has announced that its figures show that more cases have been recorded thus far in 1944 than in any comparable period in 28 years—which means,
of course, since the dreadful epidemic of 1916.

In that year 6,767 cases were reported by August. This year the total number of cases may reach 10,000 by September 1, twice as many as in 1931, the second worst outbreak in the country's history.

Medical men throughout America are working with the greatest speed possible to isolate and discover means of controlling this terrible virus. It is a disease both infectious and contagious and while certain methods of mitigating the paralyzing effects have been effective in monkeys, there has not been sufficient time or cases to secure a proper test on human beings.

Fortunately—a fact not widely known—many of the cases reported are completely cured by proper medical care. But this is little enough. It will be a happy day for America, and the world,
when medical science finally achieves lasting victory over polio.

COMMUNICATION

U. S. Pacific Fleet Air Force
Fleet Air, West Coast
August 25, 1944

Editor Courier: I have read in The Bristol Courier about the curfew the people of Bristol are discussing. I wish to submit this letter for your consideration.

I think the people of Bristol should consider a few things before they take any action. I think you all should remember that the city of Bristol has hardly any recreation for the teen age boys and girls whatsoever. The younger generation of today wants to go out and enjoy themselves. A

"movie" shouldn't be considered as a well rounded evening for the teen age boys and girls, as you know that we haven't much more than a "movie" in our city. (Why is this?)

in raising funds for worthy activities. I think that since we have such an understanding city, why not raise a sufficient amount of money to build a city recreation center for the teen-age boys and girls? There isn't any reason why our city shouldn't be capable of such a worthy project. I have seen many smaller cities than Bristol that have tried the town recreation center project and they were very successful.

I know for a fact that many children under 16 years of age go miles

out of town for such entertainment as roller skating, dancing, parties, etc. There isn't any reason why those things should continue, since the parents of these children are so worried as to their conduct.

I am submitting this letter only

because I was reared in Bristol, and I think that I know the situation of our town.

Thanking you,
ROBERT RUSSELL ORRINO,

goes the
tide of
fighting gas!

Now another giant new catalytic cracking plant goes into production... climaxing Atlantic's $22,000,000 program of rolling out fighting gas.

This Port Arthur, Texas, unit is a twin of the plant completed by Atlantic at Point Breeze, Philadelphia, just a few weeks ago.

Pouring from the new "cats" day and night, a flood of added war fuel carries Atlantic production to the high-tide in three years of ever-mounting output.

The new upsurge comes as part of the answer to "most urgent" pleas of

U. S. generals at the attack fronts. They have called for shipments of fighting fuel "above and beyond all previous estimates." And they are getting them.

To help keep bomber and fighter planes flying, tanks plunging forward... mechanized divisions rolling on... is the great objective of Atlantic expenditure today.

It is also an investment in tomorrow... when Atlantic will process high-octane motor gasoline... bringing you the most economical, most powerful car fuel you have ever known.

GIRL ALL-STARS TO PLAY IN TRENTON TOMORROW NIGHT

Will Oppose the All-Stars of Trenton Playground and Industrial League

THE LINE-UP IS GIVEN

Bristol Girls Present Formidable Lineup of Players

With two victories safely tucked away, the Bristol All-Stars, of the Bristol Girls' Industrial League, will play its third game tomorrow evening on Wetzel Field, Trenton, meeting the All-Stars, of the Trenton Playground and Industrial League. Game will begin at 6:15 o'clock.

The local all-stars have won over the SPARS, of the U. S. Coast Guards, and last week defeated the Women Reserve, U. S. Marines, champions of the Women's All-Service Softball League, of Philadelphia.

Outstanding in the Bristol victories was the pitching of Stella Klemczak and the fielding and hitting of Theresa Gallagher and Harriet Lodge.

Fans who have seen the local lassies in action have no doubt that Coach Frank Fields has a formidable array of players in Gallagher, Klemczak, Lodge, Rita McHugh, Laura Baconofer, Betty Sallustio, Eleanor Hughes, Rose Marrazzo, Betty Linington, Frances Bianco-sino, Viola Vitale, Mildred Ritter, Dorothy Bennett, Edna Dransfield, Ella Mae Picma, Myda Bracey, Irene Van Soest, Pat Walterick, Frances Wright, and G. Lauder.

The games for the All-Stars are being booked by George Moran, president of the Bristol Industrial Girls' Softball Association.

W. B. Nissley, judge of the vegetables, commented on the fine quality of the vegetables exhibited, despite the dry weather, and told about the points to be considered in choosing vegetables for exhibit, which are—uniformity, true to shape, color, size and maturity in growth.

The Home Economics program consisted of two interesting skits; the first put on by the Edgewood and Fallsington Clubs, was a fashion show, in which the 4-H girls exhibited clothing made this year. The first year girls made either a jumper or pinafore; the second, a sports dress of cotton; and the third, a sports dress of rayon. Also, besides these, the first year girls learned to sew on buttons, the second year darning and the third year mending. After the fashion show, ribbons were awarded to the girls by their local leaders; Mrs. Amos Satterthwaite for the Edgewood Club and Mrs. Herbert Dreisbach for the Fallsington Club. The Newtown Club then put on a canning demonstration, showing the correct way to can. Following the demonstration Mrs. Charles D. Lowmes presented the girls with their awards. First awards were received by Betty Lowmes and Betty Myers; second awards by Beasy Esche.

Esther Myers, Bertha Thompson, Doris Lowmes, Betty Holwood, and Lorraine Ramsey; and third awards to Grace Yates and Evelyn Myers. Mrs. Mary Jacoby Fleetham, home economics demonstrator for Bucks County, thanked the local leaders for their great help in 4-H Club work during the summer. Mrs. James A. Dawson, local leader of the Newtown Flower Club, the only club in flowers, announced the flower club winners. First, Ned Maher; second, Fred Benerle; and, third, Wilfred Smith. A. O. Rasmussen, flower judge, commented on the flower exhibited. He said flowers were judged on perfection, straightness of stems, condition and quality of the flowers. He said the flowers exhibited were of fine quality. Rev. William Rupp, of the Great Swamp Reformed Church, was the guest speaker. Rev. Rupp was raised on a farm and has been very active in 4-H club work. He stressed the importance of keeping your eyes open to the things around you, as many things are not learned from books. Everyone should help one another as much as they can as no one is entirely self-sufficient. He said that many of the fine things, such as old fashioned neighborliness, with neighbors visiting and exchanging their home made products, are lost in the changing of our communities by the influx of new people.

SPIRIT IS MUCH BETTER

By Charles B. Kopp Marine Corps Combat Correspondent (Distributed by I. N. S.)

CAMP LEJEUNE, N. C., Aug. 29 (INS)—Although he feels most folks won't agree, no less a football celebrity than Bill Osmanski wants to go on record as being of the opinion that professional grid-ders work together better and have more spirit than college players. Osmanski, now a Lieutenant junior grade in the Navy, argued his point today from his dental office here, where he is easier on his Marine patients than he was on opponents of Holy Cross College and the Chicago Bears when he was fullback for those teams. He recently has undergone Marine training given Navy doctors, dentists, and corpsmen preparatory to duty in the field—and he has his ideas about that, too. "It's tougher than any line I ever hit," he declared.

In support of his stand on pro football, Lieut. Osmanski pointed out that the pros make the game their means of livelihood. "The old salary is at stake," he asserted, "so they gladly put out. Many men who were outshone by team mates in college become great when they play for a living. The competitive spirit is quickened on the outside. The boys are older, more in earnest.

"That's just one man's opinion," he cautioned. "I'm not arguing about the color of professional football as compared with the college sport. Even there, I believe the pro rules make a more colorful

mortgage his resources; that he is sufficiently economical in his national expenditures so that his tax program permits funding the war debt; and that he has a long-term financial program looking to coming out of debt, not getting in deeper.

Repudiation is always a danger, and will be until the War Bonds are repaid. Other nations, in financial straits, have tried it. America has toyed with the idea on various occasions.

SERGEANT PAT OF RADIO PATROL

Americans deplored the breach of a specific promise. Fewer seemed to understand that the net effect was to pay off these securities on the basis of sixty cents on the dollar. If the New Deal were to repeat this experiment, the effect on holders of War Bonds would be to give them only $15 for $25 War Bonds, $30 for the $50 bonds, and so on.

As already has been shown, inflation could be used to repudiate an even larger fraction of the bonds.

At no time in history has it ever been more to the pocketbook interest of more American citizens to demand a national administration which will stand by its financial guns.
